Getting ready at home as a group of three or more

Getting ready at one address lets three or more people share the morning and leave together. Start with the person who needs to leave first, then list the hair, hijab or makeup each guest wants. If you are looking for a group rate, ask for a quote for that exact list. There is no travel fee for the visit.

Who needs to be ready first?

List the service and departure time next to each name. Someone leaving early for portraits will need a different place in the schedule from a guest arriving later.

Allow for plans outside the styling appointment

If the bride's sister is helping fasten the dress, put that on the schedule too. You can give her a makeup slot that leaves her hands free when the bride needs her.
